Nomination Process for World Heritage Status

With the aim of encouraging production of academic and/or technical works on military-historical heritage, we are carrying out various activities in the field of Heritage Education, in order to take advantage of the inclusion of nineteen Brazilian colonial fortifications on the UNESCO (United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization) tentative list for inclusion as World Heritage sites. The road ahead is long and demanding, and a positive manifestation by local society will be necessary to include two colonial defense fortifications at the Port of Santos.

Therefore, we are reissuing the online edition of this book, updating it and directing it toward a set of educational activities related to our cultural heritage, seeking to reach "people who come together to build and share new knowledge, investigate to better understand and transform the reality around us" (Iphan).
