

The cliffs of the small coastal mountain range to the south of the Ilha de Santo Amaro protects the Barra de Santos, calming the waters of the estuary which houses the largest port in South America. At the mouth of the estuary, in a historic site of lush natural beauty, King Felipe II of Spain and Portugal (Iberian Crown: 1580-1640) commanded the construction of the rustic and exuberant walls of the Santo Amaro Fortress from 1583/1584, a site which today is a national historic monument and the Guarujá Historic Museum - heritage belonging to all of us.

At the other end of the coastal mountain range, to the east and toward the South Atlantic, is Fort Andradas, which was begun in 1942 on the eve of Brazil's participation in World War II.

The Fort Race is a sporting and thematic competition organized annually by the 1st AAA Bgd – Fort Andradas - and the CADA: sporting events company, with the support of various partners listed on the site: www.cadaeventos.com.br.
